I can gradually add more name filters if people tell me what bad names they see

I blame Apple for so many people finding out that a filter even exists they threatened to take my app down if I let people type a bad name into their own nickname box I tried to explain that no one else sees it because of the server-side filter

@Hypah I can gradually add more name filters if people tell me what bad names they see

Like ayлина said though, people are finding ways around it...like alternate spelling or special characters. I suppose if we remove special characters, and are left with the basic 26, then filtration is a lot more effective.

and they wouldn't listen

so I had to obey Apple and make it so you can experiment with bad names on the client and if it's bad, then your nickname box clears out, so you know to change it a little to get around it it used to take way more effort to realize your name is even being filtered. you'd basically need to coordinate with others and get them to find you on the map and then they'd tell you if your name changed or not but Apple seems satisfied with the client-side filter I have now, so I can still add more server-side filters that people can't find out about as easily
